learning is an unending abstract and invisible process that permeates everyone's life whether young or old rich or poor educated or illiterate learning is also an embodiment of education which transcends the four walls of the classroom therefore education is an added knowledge to one's existing knowledge which is expected to lead to behavioral modification on the part of the educatee whose efficiency and performance in his/her daily activities should consequently improve positively in the same vein mentoring has a multi-faceted dimension not limited only to the education industry but also includes all other aspects of human development process therefore this paper analyses the varying dimensions of mentoring phenomenon which may be characterized by flexibility of learning process among different groups of people in any given society the totality of such a learning encounter through mentoring process is aimed at achieving an all-round development of an individual whether such is from cognitive psychomotor or affective domain

Larry Cuban's How Teachers Taught has been widely acclaimed as a pathbreaking text on the history and evolution of classroom teaching now Cuban brings his great experience as a classroom teacher superintendent and researcher to this highly anticipated follow-up to his groundbreaking work focusing on three diverse school districts: Arlington, Virginia; Denver, Colorado; and Oakland, California. Hugging the Middle offers an incisive portrayal of how teachers teach now it is a revealing look at a range of current workable pedagogical options educators are using to engage students while satisfying parents and policymakers. Options that succeed by creating hybrid practices that combine both teacher-centered approaches (e.g., mostly direct instruction, textbooks, lectures) with student-centered ones (e.g., team projects on real-world problems, independent learning, small groupwork). This book serves as a state-of-the-profession assessment in an era of top-down educational policy.

offers practical strategies and programmes for mentoring in the context of recent work on intelligent skill development, professional thinking and learning, counselling and helping strategies and the nature and assessment of teaching competence a book on the good practice of mentoring which considers the roles of the mentor-mentee in changing workplaces affected by external forces including technology, the economy and the dismantling of middle management structures and offers guidelines for those who seek good practice
